TRANSFORMATION & REVELATION

Gormley to Gaga

UK Design for Performance 2007 -2011

This winter throughout Summerhall, thirty-three large specially designed vitrines showcase the fascinating work of British theatre designers and their creation of famous productions. In this wide-ranging and intriguing exhibition, the drawings, plans and, above all, the imagination of those who create the mystery behind a show are revealed in magical ways. Es Devlin's set designs for Lady Gaga's Monster Ball World Tour are here, as are Antony Gormley's more sparse settings for the Sadler's Wells ballet, Sutra. Joanna Scotcher's reworking of the much loved Christmas classic film, The Railway Children, for Waterloo Station Theatre reminds one of a heroic and simpler past while Connor Murphy's minimalist opera design for The Magic Flute, which intrigued South Korean audiences, can be mused over. War Horse and Billy Budd are also shown here with original models, drawings and video clips from the shows. This is a unique opportunity to see a thoughtful and visually stunning exhibition in its first staging outside London. Previously at the prestigious Victoria and Albert Museum, it's a must-see event for both families and those drawn to the stars of stage, screen and music. Inventive design is the true 'X-factor' of the British stage.

WARHOL & BEUYS

The “LOST” photographs

In 2011 a number of colour transparencies of a party held by Andy Warhol in honour of his friend, Joseph Beuys, appeared on eBay. Astonished, we here at Summerhall immediately contacted the seller and travelled to Italy to buy the collection.

What we found were twenty-nine extraordinary images thought lost to art history - colour photographs of the two most important practitioners of pop and conceptual art while they were in an Italian nightclub celebrating Joseph Beuys' birthday. One photograph (by John Studulski) of the event was published as an editioned print and poster, but it was long believed that the night had never fully been recorded on camera although some film clips exist and there were definitely other photographers present. At this first ever showing of these candid photographs in exhibition anywhere in the world, the full events of that night can be seen - from Joseph Beuys cutting a cake in the shape of his own famous hat to a cross-dressing cabaret performer - the famous Renato Zero - who Warhol seemed to think might make Beuys uncomfortable but clearly did not!

BRAW GIGS AND SUMMERHALL

Present - Helm, Phil Minton & Luke Poot Duo, and Dead Labour Process

Helm is Luke Younger - a sound artist and experimental musician, based in London, working with a vast array of revolving instrumentation and abstract sound sources. Younger's compositions build a dense aural landscape that touches on musique concrete, uncomfortable sound poetry, noise and hallucinatory drones. Younger has also performed extensively in Europe and the US with Steven Warwick as pioneering avant-drone duo Birds of Delay. Avant-garde vocalist and trumpeter Phil Minton has been performing and collaborating with countless musicians for over 30 years. Luke Poot who runs the excellent DIY label Poot Records and has performed and toured with Hard Pan, Acrid Lactations amongst others, will join him. Euan Currie of Dead Labour Process explores found and re-imagined cut ups of sound, piecing together samples and strands from various sources and blending it all into a Dadaist palette.

BRAW GIGS AND SUMMERHALL

Present - High Wolf, Wounded Knee and King Rib

Braw Gigs and Summerhall present three unique acts. High France's High Wolf possesses a natural-born ability to zero in on the tones most conducive to inducing transcendental states. Prolific without wearing out his welcome, this guitarist and manipulator of effects boxes looses fervid streams of fever-dreamy drones that suffuse any room they enter with mystery. High Wolf's tracks carry the uncanny sense of sounding as if they've been sluicing since the beginning of time, and that he had the graciousness to siphon them for teasingly brief absorption before they shimmer off to the vanishing point. Wounded Knee, Edinburgh's own shamanic soothsayer, will be performing his very own brand of home-brewed yarns with either a loop pedal or a t'wa stringed guitar. King Rib is the moniker of Graham Stewart from Scrim who brings his dance floor thud and industrial synth bliss to the DIY scene.

ONCE IT'S IN YOU IT NEVER GOES AWAY

Stephen Thorpe

Huge painterly canvasses tempt the viewer into disconcerting yet glorious interiors. Optical disillusions play tricks on one's perceptions of space while abstracted multi-dimensions pulse out into the living rooms of daily life. Nothing is the same again - in every dream home a heartache. Or a delight of coloured light tempting the soul into a house of contradictions.

Summerhall's own resident artist Stephen Thorpe, the recent winner of the Saatchi "Places and Spaces" Prize, exhibits new work in the Library Gallery including a series of new neon works - a departure from his usual committed obsession with painting.

ONE DAY/CONCERTO FOR A MOUTH & FOUR MEMBERS

Philippe Broutin

Philippe Broutin is a French poet, composer and sculptor. He is also 64 years of age and in good health. That said, he believes that his uncompromising artistic life (originally as a Lettriste standing alongside Isidore Isou during the 1968 Paris student and workers' revolt) and his isolation from others is the price he has paid for being creative. In 'One Day' the artist confronts his moment of death in advance. In a series of hanging poetic texts each visitor to the gallery is made very aware of the price of dying alone until finally he or she is confronted with the stark reality of every person's inevitable future. This beautifully bare if unnerving installation is shown in Summerhall's Meadows Gallery. Alongside the installation Broutin's "Concerto for a Mouth and Four Members" will be playing.

DATES: 15th December 2012
- 26th January 2013

12 FACTORIAL

Ingrid Christie

Ingrid Christie's interest in science, mathematics and philosophy has led to a series of works that break free from the usual fixed boundaries of painting. Her thirty year interest in meditation and consciousness feeds strongly into her work. In 'The Art of Seeing', Aldous Huxley wrote 'Consciousness is only possible through change; change is only possible through movement'. Christie hopes that the mathematics and the visual shifts of the paintings will provoke people into thinking beyond the logical to the abstract and the metaphysical.

GREAT WORKS OF ART & MORE GREAT WORKS OF ART/LET THE SUN CATCH YOU CRYING

Antonio Claudio Carvalho

Famous personalities in the world of art and literature and philosophy are the subject matter for a series of fictitious book covers or posters. In a colourful display of editions (many of which are already in museums and galleries all over the world) Carvalho delights the eye and sometimes amuses the heart by his love of his subject matter: art and life!

In a second show of print works called "Let the Sun Catch you Crying", the bright colours of the works in Summerhall's Project Room are deceptive. Once one looks closely at the works on display, one is horrified to realise the images are those of Nazi atrocities in the last World War. A series of thought-provoking screenprints which counter-balance the artist's much more playful exhibition elsewhere.

DATES: 15th December 2012
- 26th January 2013
TIME: 11.00am - 6.00pm
TICKET PRICE: Free Entry

SMALL SOCIAL SCULPTURES

An Exhibition of Joseph Beuys' Announcement Cards

Joseph Beuys was an artist who often created postcards as artworks and for most of his gallery exhibitions "announcement" cards were sent out. This small exhibition displays over one third of ALL of the cards released by the artist in his lifetime including some unique postcard works.

RICHARD DEMARCO ARCHIVE

"The Demarco Archive at Summerhall will be made manifest over the period of Advent and Christmastide by an exhibition which will focus on the following personalities and institutions living and dead. All of them have contributed highly significantly to the development of the Archive, over the last twenty-five years. They include the gallery director, Denise Rene, and Count Giuseppe Panza di Biumo, Henning Christiansen, George Wyllie and his friend, Dawson Murray, Bill Scott, Gerald Laing and Gavin Scobie, and, of course, Ian Hamilton Findlay plus Robert Callander, Mary MacIver, Margot Sandeman, Cordelia Oliver, James Howie, and other Scottish art world luminaries such as Izzy Metzstein and Cyril Gerber. We also celebrate the work of Paolo Cardazzo and Angela Weyersberg, and David Youlton. This year we are preparing to contribute to major exhibitions; one at the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew dedicated to the life and art of Rory McEwen, and the other to an exhibition dedicated to the life and art of Paul Neagu at The Henry Moore Institute in Leeds. The Demarco Archive exhibition at Summerhall will also reference the fact that the Archive will be exhibited in the National Gallery of Poland in Warsaw and in the National Gallery of Romania in Bucharest."

MARSHMALLOW

The Marshmallow Test is inspired by psychologist Walter Mischel's 1960s Stanford University marshmallow experiment and explores the subject of delayed gratification and emotional intelligence.

This is Morna Pearson's response to that work. She is an Edinburgh-based playwright, originally from Elgin. Her most recent play The Artist Man and The Mother Woman premiered at the Traverse Theatre in November 2012.

This performance is a showing of a work in progress. If you would like to attend, please RSVP to emma@playwrightsstudio.co.uk by 5pm on Friday 11 January 2013.
